Word murder use in a sentence

C: 「殺人(事件)がありました」と思います。 It's hard to say exactly from just the opening paragraph, but it was probably the author's intention to create dramatic tension for the climax that ultimately included the listed murder. He points out that the narrator/hero will be involved in the murder situation at some point in the story. He could end up as a murderer, he'll go to murder, or someone who knows he'll be murdered and investigate. In particular it was as though I got a murder because of the previous sentence I wanted a word job, and the two together created a kind of dramatic irony that all the hero wanted some work to do, but instead they were thrown into an undesirable situation.
